

Creating Number Patterns

For each row, the teacher might insert a number on any blank and write an appropriate jump interval (ones, twos, halves, tens, etc.) above one arch in that row. It may not be necessary to rewrite the jump interval above each arch, but that is an option for differentiation.

The student then fills in all the other numbers using the consistent jump interval, thus creating an arithmetic sequence.

